Foreword

If you have been paying any attention to the news online, you have likely already come across the large plastic coffins which are now stored all around the nation by FEMA. Some believe that these are proof of a government conspiracy to kill off large portions of the population in anticipation of a coming new world order. The company which makes the coffins claims that these are nothing more than grave liners which have been pre-sold; they claim they are required by law to have these in stock once they are purchased—just in case EVERYONE dies at once, I suppose.

But both of these claims do not seem to fit the evidence. Why?

First, the company that makes these also makes coffins. So if they are to have these liners on hand for pre-sales, then why do they not also have to have the actual coffins to go into them on hand? It just seems odd that they would be required to have the liners in stock and not the actual coffins which are to be placed within them. No, this answer fails the muster of good sense and logic, so it cannot be the case.

The other argument, that the government is using FEMA to conspire against the people to kill the majority and make the remaining people slaves to the elite seems strange as well. First, the elite hold their positions in part because they like the power they have over people. Without anyone to rule, what fun is that? In addition, that is assuming that somehow, millions of people have jointly conspired to eliminate many millions more. We see clearly today that not even a few hundred of these so-called elite can get along long enough to make the simplest of decisions. How could these same people, in conjunction with millions more ever come to a consensus to eradicate the mass of humanity? No, that just doesn't seem plausible.

In addition, based on the figures that the claimants of this eradication conspiracy provide, the population of the U.S. alone would drop by nearly 270,000,000. There are a bunch of coffins, but nowhere near enough for that many people. So this claim does not stand up to good sense, logic, and reasonableness. It just doesn't fly.

So could there be another plausible explanation for all the coffins? What could be so serious that the Federal Government believes that sometime in the near future millions of coffins are going to be needed...and quick? Is it possible that our government knows something it is not telling us, perhaps out of fear that we'll panic? Or is there something even more sinister at play?

In this book, we'll discuss the possibility that our government knows about other enemies, which exist far beyond our borders...so far in fact, that we simply cannot take the battle to them. This is the reason we need to be prepared...the battle is coming to us.

These enemies have visited our shores before, many times in fact, and our government now believes that they are planning an attack that will cost millions of lives. I'll present you with evidence that these enemies have not only visited our shores in the past, but also locations throughout the earth. They have left evidence behind and at one time, they even ruled the entire globe. These enemies are the Annunaki.

In the first few chapters of this book, I'm going to outline not only why I believe our government knows that an attack is imminent, but also what they are doing about it. I'll present maps and locations that show what is being done along with additional evidence that just happens to coincide with this information in such a way that there can be only one explanation.

Moving on, we'll discuss the evidence supporting the plausibility of an alien attack, that is an attack by the Annunaki. As mentioned, they've been here before—many times in fact. Indeed, whereas the Annunaki are known to have visited earth thousands of years ago, there is strong evidence that they have come back frequently in recent years. But how is this possible and why?

To understand this, we need only consider just how near to Earth their planet

Nibiru actually is. Nibiru is only 51 light years from Earth so to get an idea of that distance, we need to do some calculations.

One light year is the equivalent of 5,878,625,000,000 miles. In other words, a light year is just under 6 Quadrillion miles. Ok, so that still doesn't really tell us much, right? Try this then, the sun is 92,960,000 miles from earth. This means that to travel one light year, a person would have to travel to the sun and back 31,619 times. So a light year is a really long way. Now Nibiru is located 51 light years from Earth, which means that to get here and back, travelers must go the distance from Earth to the Sun, 1,612,574 times. I know, that still doesn't tell us much, right?

Try this. Recently scientists discovered a planet 36 light years away they are referring to as a Super-Earth, HD85512b. Some physics guys got together and calculated how long it would take to reach that planet given certain reasonable parameters. We know that it would not be possible to sustain more than 4G travel for prolonged periods and physics laws do not allow for instant up-to-cruise-speed travel, which means we must accelerate then decelerate for our journey. If we could accelerate at a constant 1G/hour for half the trip to HD85512b, then decelerate at the same rate (we will have to slow down you know), this will put us arriving at HD85512b in 38 Earth years. Not bad.

Now, if we figure that it would take us 38 years to travel 36 light years at this rate of acceleration, then to travel 51 light years would take around 54 – 55 years.

Hence, if they began traveling here somewhere around the turn of the 20th Century, they would have begun arriving somewhere in the 1950s. In fact, during this time there was a strong increase in UFO sightings and evidence of visitations. These continued for some time then waned for a bit. However, all that changed around the turn of the 21st century. Why?

This could have something to do with what our government is not telling us. As you shall see as we move into the final chapters of this book, there is a very good reason for this. In addition, you will see that the world is on the verge of another visit. This one will be more than simple exploratory missions like those we have already seen. This one will involve a full-scale invasion. The only question is, can we do anything to protect ourselves and if so, what?

Read on. This information could prevent you from being one of those in the FEMA coffins.

FEMA to the Rescue?

FEMA stands for Federal Emergency Management Agency. It was created by President Jimmy Carter when he merged several related agencies under a single aegis, thus simplifying emergency relief provisions in the nation. Since that time, it was undergone many additional changes, with the most striking being its move to the newly-formed Department of Homeland Security after the 2001 Terrorist attacks in NYC.

To better understand what FEMA does, we can simply look to FEMA.

Mission

“FEMA’s mission is to support our citizens and first responders to ensure that as a nation we work together to build, sustain and improve our capability to prepare for, protect against, respond to, recover from and mitigate all hazards.”

Statutory Authority

“Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, PL 100-707, signed into law November 23, 1988; amended the Disaster Relief Act of 1974, PL 93-288. This Act constitutes the statutory authority for most federal disaster response activities especially as they pertain to FEMA and FEMA programs.”

Homeland Security Act

History

“The Federal Emergency Management Agency coordinates the federal government's role in preparing for, preventing, mitigating the effects of, responding to, and recovering from all domestic disasters, whether natural or man-made, including acts of terror. FEMA can trace its beginnings to the Congressional Act of 1803. This act, generally considered the first piece of disaster legislation, provided assistance to a New Hampshire town following an extensive fire. In the century that followed, ad hoc legislation was passed more than 100 times in response to hurricanes, earthquakes, floods and other natural disasters.

“By the 1930s, when the federal approach to problems became popular, the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was given authority to make disaster loans for repair and reconstruction of certain public facilities following an earthquake, and later, other types of disasters. In 1934, the Bureau of Public Roads was given authority to provide funding for highways and bridges damaged by natural disasters. The Flood Control Act, which gave the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers greater authority to implement flood control projects, was also passed. This piecemeal approach to disaster assistance was problematic and it prompted legislation that required greater cooperation between federal agencies and authorized the President to coordinate these activities.

“The 1960s and early 1970s brought massive disasters requiring major federal response and recovery operations by the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration, established within the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). Hurricane Carla struck in 1962, Hurricane Betsy in 1965, Hurricane Camille in 1969 and Hurricane Agnes in 1972. The Alaskan Earthquake hit in 1964 and the San Fernando Earthquake rocked Southern California in 1971. These events served to focus attention on the issue of natural disasters and brought about increased legislation. In 1968, the National Flood Insurance Act offered new flood protection to homeowners, and in 1974 the Disaster Relief Act firmly established the process of Presidential disaster declarations.

“However, emergency and disaster activities were still fragmented. When hazards associated with nuclear power plants and the transportation of hazardous substances were added to natural disasters, more than 100 federal agencies were involved in some aspect of disasters, hazards and emergencies. Many parallel programs and policies existed at the state and local level, compounding the complexity of federal disaster relief efforts. The National Governor's Association sought to decrease the many agencies with which state and local governments were forced work. They asked President Jimmy Carter to centralize federal emergency functions.”

EXECUTIVE ORDER 12127

“President Carter's 1979 executive order merged many of the separate disaster-related responsibilities into the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). Among other agencies, FEMA absorbed: the Federal Insurance Administration, the National Fire Prevention and Control Administration, the National Weather Service Community Preparedness Program, the Federal Preparedness Agency of the General Services Administration and the Federal Disaster Assistance Administration activities from HUD. Civil defense responsibilities were also transferred to the new agency from the Defense Department's Defense

Civil Preparedness Agency.

John Macy was named as FEMA's first director. Macy emphasized the similarities between natural hazards preparedness and the civil defense activities. FEMA began development of an Integrated Emergency Management System with an all-hazards approach that included "direction, control and warning systems which are common to the full range of emergencies from small isolated events to the ultimate emergency - war."

"The new agency was faced with many unusual challenges in its first few years that emphasized how complex emergency management can be. Early disasters and emergencies included the contamination of Love Canal, the Cuban refugee crisis and the accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant. Later, the Loma Prieta Earthquake in 1989 and Hurricane Andrew in 1992 focused major national attention on FEMA. In 1993, President Clinton nominated James L. Witt as the new FEMA director. Witt became the first agency director with experience as a state emergency manager. He initiated sweeping reforms that streamlined disaster relief and recovery operations, insisted on a new emphasis regarding preparedness and mitigation, and focused agency employees on customer service. The end of the Cold War also allowed Witt to redirect more of FEMA's limited resources from civil defense into disaster relief, recovery and mitigation programs.

"In 2001, President George W. Bush appointed Joe M. Allbaugh as the director of FEMA. Within months, the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11th focused the agency on issues of national preparedness and homeland security, and tested the agency in unprecedented ways. The agency coordinated its activities with the newly formed Office of Homeland Security, and FEMA's Office of National Preparedness was given responsibility for helping to ensure that the nation's first responders were trained and equipped to deal with weapons of mass destruction."

A NEW MISSION: HOMELAND SECURITY

"Billions of dollars of new funding were directed to FEMA to help communities face the threat of terrorism. Just a few years past its 20th anniversary, FEMA was actively directing its "all-hazards" approach to disasters toward homeland security issues. In March 2003, FEMA joined 22 other federal agencies, programs and offices in becoming the Department of Homeland Security. The new department, headed by Secretary Tom Ridge, brought a coordinated approach to national security from emergencies and disasters - both natural and man-made.

"On October 4, 2006, President George W. Bush signed into law the Post-Katrina Emergency Reform Act. The act significantly reorganized FEMA, provided it substantial new authority to remedy gaps that became apparent in the response to Hurricane Katrina in August 2005, the most devastating natural disaster in U.S. history, and included a more robust preparedness mission for FEMA.

"As it has for almost 30 years, FEMA's mission remains: to lead America to prepare for, prevent, respond to and recover from disasters with a vision of "A Nation Prepared."

Regions

FEMA is divided into ten regions. These are as follows.

Region I (Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont)

Region II (New Jersey, New York, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands)

Region III (Delaware, District of Columbia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, Virginia and W. Virginia)

Region IV (Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Mississippi, N. Carolina, S. Carolina and Tennessee)

Region V (Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio and Wisconsin)

Region VI (Arkansas, Louisiana, New Mexico, Oklahoma and Texas)

Region VII (Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska)

Region VIII (Colorado, Montana, N. Dakota, S. Dakota, Utah and Wyoming)

Region IX (Arizona, California, Hawaii, Nevada, American Samoa, Guam, Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, Republic of the Marshall Islands, and Federated States of Micronesia)

Region X (Alaska, Idaho, Oregon and Washington)

So FEMA has a role in serving the nation regardless of the emergency, whether that involves natural disaster or war. In other words, if the nation were to come under alien attack, FEMA would take charge because that is what their purpose is—to handle any emergency threatening the United States in any way or help the nation recover from such a disaster.

So what about the so-called FEMA Coffins?

FEMA Coffins?

There has been considerable buzz on the internet of late regarding so-called FEMA coffins. Are these really coffins or simply “coffin liners” as the company which makes them states?

That’s a good question, but not an easy answer. According to some reports, these “liners” have lids, which are separate from the liners. Now, I’m not a coffin expert nor am I a coffin liner expert, but I do know that I have ALWAYS seen coffins come equipped with lids and never a liner with such.

So it seems to me that the official story that these are simply liners does not fish with bait. On the next page, you can see one of these so-called coffin liners, complete with lid and decide for yourself.

Of course, as mentioned in the Foreword, there are enough coffins for millions of people, but not enough to satisfy the suggestions made by many that these are destined for use in a governmental extermination of our own people. Thus, FEMA must intend these coffins for some other use and are keeping us in the dark for a good reason. Certainly, imminent attack by aliens, namely the Annunaki would be a good reason.

Indeed, given the size and design, each coffin is made so that several humans could be buried within in sort of a humane mass burial style.

Humane?

Indeed, this is further proof that this is not some form of sick scheme by the wealthy and powerful to eliminate 90% of the population. Logically speaking, in such a scenario, rather than take the enormous time required to bury some 370 million people, they would simply dig giant holes like the NAZI's did and shove the bodies in with a bulldozer.

No, these liners indicate that the government is remaining sensitive to cultural mores and decency, which indicates there is another reason. Hence, our government clearly anticipates something big and this could certainly not include a Terrorist attack from any known terrorist groups in the world. Why?

The only groups capable of inflicting damage to the degree to which this points all have access to nukes. A Nuclear weapons attack would not require coffins, for the bodies are incinerated. Thus, this is something very different and very big. This must be something no one living in our generation has ever seen before.

The only thing that fits that description is an alien attack.

FEMA “Camps” and Extra Ammo

What about the so-called FEMA “camps” and millions of rounds of extra ammo which has been ordered for and supplied to social security officers and other in similar facilities? Are these not an indication that our government is planning an attack on its own citizens?

On the surface it may appear so, but bear in mind that every officer working in every government office is first and foremost, a police officer. They are in the offices to render police-type duties, though fortunately they are seldom required to do much along these lines. Still, they will be part of the front lines against any kind of attack and if we never know from where that attack is to come, they all need to be well-armed. Indeed, if the aliens choose to land first somewhere in Nebraska, there will be no time to issue supplies. They need to be ready.

As for the camps, consider a few very good reasons why these cannot be part of some grand conspiracy to destroy the citizens of the nation and make them slaves.

First, if they were to be slaves, the conditions in the “camps” would not be suitable for decent living. Look back at the slaves kept in America prior to the Civil War. These were kept in the cheapest of squalid conditions. Even early prisons were not “decent” places to keep people and this resulted in the changes in corrections facilities over the course of the last 40 years. The only reason such changes came about was because of the lobbying efforts of private citizens who abhorred the conditions.

If this were all part of some grand scheme by the elite to destroy most of the population while enslaving the others, there would be little along the lines of modern, air-conditioned buildings and something more akin to the Soviet Gulags or NAZI Concentrations camps. In other words, the facilities would more resemble places to keep cattle. No, the creature comforts indicate that these camps are exactly what FEMA represents them as...places for those displaced by disaster to live until they can return home.

But this brings up an interesting question. Why so many camps with the ability to house so many people? And why in so many locations, even where historically there have never been such disasters?

Look again at the above map depicting the locations of all the FEMA offices and divisions. The offices and primary camps are indicated by the orange dot. One office/camp per region, though according to many sources, this is supposedly growing. In fact, the website kickthemallout.com has uncovered additional maps showing proposed FEMA camps and these number into the hundreds.

Now supposedly, each camp can hold upwards of 50,000 people. If there are hundreds of such camps, this means that safe havens for millions can be provided. For instance, let us assume for sake of argument that FEMA builds 500 such camps. This means that 25,000,000 people will be able to find shelter within these camps. Not that many considering that the population exceeds 300,000,000. Of course, when the aliens attack, there will be millions of casualties, which is in part what the coffins are for. In part?

Naturally, there will be many millions who will be vaporized in some manner by Annunaki weapons. We possess such weapons today and there is no reason to believe that a superior race would not as well. So the Camps and coffins will hopefully take care of the majority of our population. And bear in mind too that many will not enter the camps, but will instead be taken captive by the Annunaki. This we can expect based on evidence from their past visits, but I digress. We'll cover that in a later chapter.

Compare the two maps shown. The first represents all the projected FEMA camps and the second represents all the locations of alien sightings in the last 60 years. Notice a pattern?

The locations with the most sightings are provided with more camps. This is because it is believed that each sighting represents a scouting mission. Thus, it is believed that these are the locations where the Annunaki will make their presence most felt. Apparently, FEMA believes this as well and is taking the necessary steps to ensure the survival of our people.

Emergency Preparation

Since its inception, FEMA has been all about both helping during disasters as well as making preparation for various forms of emergency. Thus, while many are seeing conspiracies in what FEMA is doing, the agency simply ignores these and continues working hard. They do this because they know that after the Annunaki attack, all allegations of conspiracy will not matter. What will matter is ensuring that America as a nation survives and is able to fight off the threat.

This is why after the events of 9/11, FEMA was moved to the newly formed Department of Homeland Security.

Homeland Security

Few would argue that given the threats to national security from so many different directions, a Department of Homeland Security is a wise concept. Indeed, after the events of 9/11 President George W. Bush requested and Congress approved the establishment of the Department of Homeland Security with its director answering directly to the President. This new department streamlined intelligence operations in the nation by bringing several interrelated, though disjointed departments under one roof.

Thus, this department was able to assess threats from disparate directions.

The Purpose of the Department of Homeland Security

The stated mission of the United States Department of Homeland Security is...

“to secure the nation from the many threats we face. This requires the dedication of more than 240,000 employees in jobs that range from aviation and border security to emergency response, from cybersecurity analyst to chemical facility inspector. Our duties are wide-ranging, but our goal is clear - keeping America safe.”

Regarding disasters and the plans in place to both prevent and respond to these, DHS has developed the following guidelines. Pay special attention to these for although some apply in some circumstances, only a single potential disaster encompasses all elements described.

Since 9/11, DHS has made significant progress in how we respond to a wide range of threats, from natural disasters to coordinated attacks.

Establishing and improving a unified incident command system

FEMA has established sixteen Incident Management Assistance Teams (IMATs) that utilize the ICS as their core organizational management structure.

Using the authorities outlined under the Homeland Security Presidential Directive -5 and the Stafford Act, FEMA leads the federal interagency team in support of state governors.

Enhancing Emergency Communication Infrastructure and Improving Interoperability

Emergency and Interoperable Communications Plans: In 2008, the DHS Office of Emergency Communications (OEC) developed the National Emergency Communications Plan in coordination with more than 150 public safety practitioners at all levels of government and across responder disciplines, which serves as the first nationwide strategic plan to improve emergency communications and drive measurable progress.

Urban Area Emergency Communications: In 2010, OEC worked with 60 urban areas to assess emergency communications during a real-world situation. All 60 urban areas successfully demonstrated appropriate response-level emergency communications.

Building Nuclear, Radiological, and Biological Preparedness and Response Measures

State and Local Radiological Emergency Preparedness: DHS's Domestic Nuclear Detection Office has trained more than 23,000 state and local officers and first responders in radiological and nuclear detection. In addition, through the Securing the Cities initiative, nearly 13,000 personnel in the New York City region have been trained in preventive radiological and nuclear detection operations and nearly 8,500 pieces of radiological detection equipment have been deployed. The Administration has proposed expanding the Securing the Cities initiative to additional high risk regions of the country.

BioWatch: BioWatch is a federally-managed, locally-operated, nationwide bio-surveillance system designed to detect the intentional release of aerosolized biological agents. Through the BioWatch program, an environmental surveillance system that provides early detection of biological agents, DHS's Office of Health Affairs has collected over 1.1 million samples in more than 30 cities nationwide over the past five years to enhance protection and preparedness for high-consequence biological threats.

Private Sector Preparedness

Voluntary Private Sector Preparedness Accreditation and Certification Program (PS-Prep™): DHS created the PS-Prep™ program, a partnership between DHS and the private sector that enables private entities to receive emergency preparedness certification. Under PS-Prep™, DHS and FEMA adopted three industry standards to assist organizations in assessing their preparedness and resiliency. In March 2012, DHS certified the first private sector company certified DHS-selected standards under the PS-Prep program.

Ready Business Campaign: FEMA promotes private sector preparedness through its Ready Business campaign, a nationwide initiative that provides materials to businesses to encourage continuity planning and crisis management. Ready Business is part of larger preparedness outreach efforts by FEMA that include the Ready campaign and Citizen Corps, to encourage Americans to prepare for emergencies in their homes, businesses, and communities.

Risk Mitigation Training: Each year, more than 33,000 state, local and private sector partners participate in risk mitigation training on a range of topics including managing floodplain development, planning for post-disaster integrated management, conducting benefit cost analysis and emergency management planning, preparedness, training and education.

Allocating Homeland Security Funding Based on Risk

Since fiscal year 2003, DHS has awarded more than $36 billion in preparedness grant funding based on risk to build and sustain targeted capabilities to prevent, protect against, respond to, and recover from threats or acts of terrorism and natural disasters.

Threat and Hazard Identification and Risk Assessments (THIRAs): Beginning in FY 2012, all states receiving homeland security grant funding are required to develop and maintain a Threat and Hazard Identification and Risk Assessment, which includes the range of threats and hazards faced by an applicant. Through the THIRA process, states will compare existing capabilities with target capabilities to identify potential gaps and focus grant funding accordingly.

The National Preparedness Goal: In 2011 DHS announced the country's first-ever National Preparedness Goal required under Presidential Policy Directive (PPD) 8. The goal sets the vision for nationwide preparedness and identifies the core capabilities and targets necessary to achieve preparedness across five mission areas laid out under PPD 8: prevention, protection, mitigation, response and recovery. To support this effort, DHS completed the first Strategic National Risk Assessment in 2011, which helped identify the types of incidents that pose the greatest threat to the nation's homeland security.

FY 2012 Grant Allocations: All fiscal year (FY) 2012 grant funding was tied to the five mission areas and core capabilities of the National Preparedness Goal. Grant funding is provided to states, tribes, territories, and local communities to build preparedness capability at all levels.

Notice first how “Emergency and Interoperable Communications Plans” have been established in the event that a national emergency totally disrupts all communications. This could only be a concern in the event of an attack of the range that only China or aliens could administer. And lest we forget, China is so dependent on the United States for their economy there is really no concern of a direct attack from this nation. Then notice that there are 23,000 nuclear responders. Again, only China or aliens could render such an attack as to make so many trained officers needed. In addition, there is a large web of Biological detection devices in place. Naturally, these would be useful in the event of a biological attack from terrorist cells, but it is worthy to note that from what we learn of the Annunaki from ancient Sumerian cuneiform texts, these aliens seemed to prefer biological warfare to all other forms; they even interbred with humans for some unknown reason. Some believe, based on Egyptian Hieroglyphs that the purpose had something to do with control over future generations. We have uncovered evidence that this is likely the case and this will be discussed in a later chapter.

Finally, as we can see from the emphasis on private sector training and funding of these programs, the United States Government is taking the risk very seriously.

Why would FEMA be in This Department?

As already covered in the first chapter, FEMA has historically been the primary agency in providing both relief to those involved in a disaster as well as on the front lines in preparing for such.

Thus, it only makes sense that the DHS would include FEMA in plans to mitigate plans and minimize harm to our citizens. Indeed, FEMA has the experience needed when the Annunaki attack.

What if Aliens Attack?

This is a very good question. What would happen if Aliens attack?

First, it should be understood that to achieve light-speed travel, which is what would be required to travel between Nibiru, the home planet of the Annunaki and Earth would require advances in technology such as we can only imagine at this point. There is evidence that this race has been visiting Earth for many thousands of years, since at least the time of the rise of the Sumerian civilization. Hence, these beings are thousands of years advanced to us. There may be little we can

succumb to their will.

To illustrate, consider what would be the situation if we were able to send a modern Aircraft Carrier back in time to about the 16th Century. Imagine what would happen to the Spanish Galleons that attempted to fire on such a vessel. A single F-18 could entirely destroy a fleet of such ships. This is the equivalent of the Annunaki against America. Setting aside the fantastic belief set forth in the popular movie, Independence Day, there is no possible way we could win a war against such a superior technology. At least not in a direct head-to-head battle. But that movie did provide some clue as to what would be needed to actually defeat such an enemy.

Indeed, the only means possible to defeat an enemy of vastly superior force is to infiltrate their command structure and conduct raids of espionage. Sun Tsu, in the Art of War described this thousands of years ago. He said that when outnumbered, hide and fight on the sly. This is the tactic that George Washington used to defeat the British during the Revolution and which terrorists and freedom fighters employ even today against larger forces. But more is needed when an enemy holds a major technological advantage. Espionage.

Yes, the only way to defeat the Annunaki is to infiltrate their ranks such that they would believe that they are in complete control. Then, over time we can learn their weaknesses and eventually launch an attack. In fact, there is evidence that this may be the reason they left Earth the last two times they came. They were driven off by humans who infiltrated very well. So they are not going to be as easy the next go-round. Fortunately, we have managed to decipher many of the texts left by the ancients and these provide clues as to how we can defeat them, once they have “defeated” us. This will be discussed later in this book in greater detail.

Global Alien Conflict?

There exists ample evidence that a global alien conflict is not only inevitable, but also imminent. The likelihood for aliens to come to earth is so well-accepted that even the major news organizations have discussed these possibilities. For instance, ABC News carried a story some time ago about Six frontiers for alien life: <http://www.nbcnews.com/id/28148553/#.UReG-6Xong8>. What is most telling about this feature, however, lies in what most already know about the news organizations: They do nothing without at least tacit approval from the government. Thus, if the news is talking about aliens, someone in the government must know something they are not telling the rest of us.

As the rest of this book will demonstrate, there is ample evidence that not only have the Annunaki been on Earth in the past and have been returning in larger numbers during the 20th and 21st Centuries, their next arrival will not be friendly. Indeed, their last two major visits were not friendly, but rather, they subjected humans to do their will.

Peoples in the past left records for us to understand what their intent is and how we can adapt so that the next time they are defeated (and they will be defeated), it will be decisive. This time, it is them or us.

Secure the Homeland?

Will Homeland Security and FEMA be able to secure the homeland from the Annunaki?

Doubtful. As already mentioned, their technology far outstrips that of our own and any attempts to fight them directly will fail as surely as a Spanish Galleon taking on an Aircraft Carrier. The only way to win is to infiltrate and win their trust. Once we understand them better, we will be able to defeat them with finality. We have uncovered much information in the last fifty years which we can use to defeat the Annunaki, but this will require that common folks like you and I get involved. Later in this book, we'll discuss information that deals with this specifically. For now, we must understand that our government is gearing up for a full-out frontal assault, which is doomed to failure. Once this stand has failed, the Annunaki will completely invade, leaving only those individuals who have determined to oppose them through covert means. It may take some time to defeat them from within, but we do what we must, right?

Bases of Operation Nationwide

As was already shown on the earlier map of the FEMA Camps, these are actually bases of operation for all those seeking to fight against the Annunaki directly. These will actually be the first targets by the Annunaki, or at least the targets they seek as they know there will be opposition. They know this based on previous attacks by our government. They know this based on their scouting attempts. They know this based on experience with humans in the past.

For instance, many years ago near Roswell, New Mexico, an alien ship was shot down by the Air Force and quickly moved to a secure facility in southern Nevada known today as Area 51. In addition, this "closed down" base at Groom Lake is not only operational today, but also appears to be staged as a central command post when the Annunaki arrive.

Area 51

Area 51 is so secretive that the United States government refuses to acknowledge that it even exists.

Yet, anyone who has ever been even near to the boundaries of the facility have been escorted away at gunpoint by Air Force security. Interesting response for a non-existent facility. Even more interesting is the fact that this facility does not even show up on maps.

Even if you try to find it on Google Earth today, you will be taken to Area 51 – the Aurora Cineplex and the Fringe Miniature Golf near Roswell, Georgia. In the early years of Google Earth, that is, before Google became so large and influenced by the government, this search led to Groom Lake Airforce Base where many images were fortunately saved by interested individuals.

To find it on Google Earth today, you must type in Groom Lake, Nevada. There you will see an image of the “closed down” Air Force base known by most who understand the governmental cover-up relating to aliens as Area 51. Closed indeed. Take a look at the image that to the right. Does this look like a non-operational base?

Look now very closely at the image above. Look at the series of roads leading alongside the mountain in the lower left of the image. Do you see what appears to be some form of triangle?

If you zoom in closely on this area of the closed down, not currently used Air Force base not called Area 51, you will see something truly amazing. In fact, when we first found it, we thought we were seeing things, but we were not. Take a look at the following image. What do YOU see?

We saw the same thing.

Indeed, there at Area 51, which does not exist, is a brand new, modern pyramid. To be sure, we wondered about this for some time until we uncovered some startling evidence involving what the ancient Sumerians referred to as "Transference Crystals."

We'll discuss these crystals in greater detail later, but from what we read of the ancient texts, several references were made to these crystals and their ability to “transfer” certain fundamental benefits to wearers...human wearers. The reason these crystals are important to understanding why this pyramid is found at an Air Force Base that does not exist is because experiments conducted on the crystals provided a strong and interesting connection between these and every other pyramid on the planet.

The reason these tests were performed was because these crystals were found at a remote location with a largely unexplored pyramid. Within the Pyramid were found additional writings, but rather than hieroglyphs as expected, they were cuneiform. In reading the inscriptions, it was determined there was some connection between these crystals and the pyramids. So tests were conducted by Dr. Hans Grube of the Alien Contact Institute.

I believe that the government has somehow made similar connections for why else would they have built a pyramid?

However, I also believe that the government has come to different conclusions than we. It is my belief that the government believes it can use this pyramid to fight the Annunaki somehow. Whether this plan will work or not remains to be seen. However, I do know that if the plan fails, there needs to be a Plan B, the infiltration into Annunaki society by right-minded individuals. Fortunately, the discovery of the crystals provided my research team with the information needed to devise a plan for just that.

To better understand how this plan will work, we first need to understand the motives of the Annunaki by taking a look at their history on Earth.

Annunaki in the Past

They have been here before...they are coming again. How do we know?

Worldwide, evidence of visits from alien life forms has been abundant for years. Indeed, images such as the cave drawing to the left have had many pondering what sort of beings were depicted throughout history. Today, however, we understand why someone would be drawn as if wearing some sort of protective head gear. Either that person was from under the ocean or from outside the planetary atmosphere. This is because we now understand that no matter the life form, if it moves and breathes, chances are that it requires air of some kind to live. If aliens did visit our planet in the past, they would have arrived wearing some form of protective mask.

This they would have worn at least until they figured out whether they could breathe in our atmosphere. Researchers worldwide are taking another look at many of the art forms, drawings, sculptures, and reliefs we once gave just a glance at. The results are that a new understanding of the past and the role played by aliens is emerging.

In fact, the earliest recorded history includes many indications and direct references to life coming to Earth from outside our planetary boundaries. In addition to written accounts, relief images relate that aliens have been here before. Let's look at but a few of the more telling accounts.

Sumeria

Perhaps no civilization has provided more information regarding the Annunaki than the Sumerian. The likely reason is because this was the civilization which had first contact with these aliens and they were taught much from or trained by them.

Zechariah Sitchin has studied the ancient Sumerian cuneiform cylinder and tablets upon which much of our understanding is based perhaps closer than anyone. He has concluded that Earth was important to their culture primarily for the gold. The gold had something to do with their longevity.

The website, alieninfluence.com has an interesting way of explaining the effect the Annunaki had on early humanity. It states,

“This advanced culture seemingly sprang up overnight. It bore the hallmarks of an aware and technologically capable society at a time when no-one can point to any possible precursor. Taxes, irrigation, public buildings, a priesthood, a civil code, factories, all appeared pretty much out of nowhere. If that isn't having an influence on us, I'd like to know what is!

“For example, if we were bred to be slaves of a kind, isn't it interesting that we have the same attitude to our animals? We breed them with little thought to their emotions, feelings, desires or anything else. We impose our desires on them, much as the Annunaki imposed theirs on us.

“And what of the strange fixation we have with adornments, precious metals and sex? If the records are exact, then these same traits were those of the aliens. They enjoyed gold jewelry. They altered us to be able to have sex and produce all the time (not the norm!), and they generally showed us the way to behave...belligerently, with little regard to others and to concentrate on outward show rather than inward meaning.

“Now, I know these are huge generalizations, but the traits we exhibit as humans must have come from somewhere. I do not subscribe to the theory that these are natural developments of evolution. They are, in many ways, unnatural.”

Source: <http://www.alieninfluence.com/annunaki.html>

This correlates to exactly what historians explain about the origins of western civilization. Civilization seemed to just instantly spring up from nowhere and historians are hard-pressed to understand why. Certainly, the influence of the Annunaki explains this fact, but most historians prefer to conveniently ignore this information. Instead, there is a general preference to simply say, “It is a mystery.”

But let us return to the matter of the gold.

Have you ever noticed how this too seems to be a hallmark of civilization? Throughout history, humans have treated gold as if it is something special. Many, even today, act as if they worship gold, as if it somehow holds life-giving properties. Indeed, this love of gold has even transferred itself into the human attitude about currency and money in general, likely because at one time, paper money was tied directly to gold. But really, what is the big deal with gold?

It is a shiny, pretty, malleable metal. That's it. Aside from this, there is no real value. It is too soft to build with and too stable to combine with many other elements to turn it into anything useful other than jewelry. I can see women loving gold, as they often have a passion for jewelry, but why do men also have such a strong affection for this metal?

Could it be that because the Annunaki were so in love with the stuff for reasons once lost to time that this love sort of transferred to humanity, as did the rest of their attitudes and values?

Certainly, that would be plausible. But in reality, we have evidence today that helps us perhaps understand this love of gold. This will be discussed later.

This love of gold on the part of the Annunaki would also explain why when the Spanish arrived in South America the natives there knew about gold and where to find it, but did not use it themselves. There is evidence that the Annunaki visited the continent at some point, but for whatever reason, the natives did not adopt their love of gold, though they clearly helped mine it, for they well understood the techniques.

Nazca Lines

When the Spanish arrived on the shores of the New World, they were greeted like gods. Indeed, the natives in South America treated these men as if they were far greater than they. Why?

One reason given by historians is because they arrived in massive ships, sailing on the water and they leave it at that.

However, could it be that they had recalled stories from their elders about the arrival of large vessels from the sky? Notice how the ancient relief on the previous page found in Sumeria depicts what clearly appears to be a space ship of some sort. If the South American Indians had seen such things, later generations would surely have equated the large Spanish ships with similar transport used by the Annunaki. This could explain why they were so eager to show the Spanish where to find the gold and how to mine it.

But is there any evidence to indicate that these peoples were visited by the Annunaki at some point?

There certainly is.

What has become the Nazca lines are lines etched into the earth in modern day Peru. From the ground, these lines mean little but from 20,000 feet, they become very clear.

In the one on the previous page, what appears to be a Dragonfly is etched very skillfully. And below is the clear image of a spider. Beside that, you can clearly make out the image of a spider monkey. But remember, these only appear clearly from high above. The ancient South Americans left no indication they had learned anything about flight, so these must have either been made by, or the making directed by someone else who did have access to machines of flight.

Thus, we have strong evidence of a visit here of the Annunaki. But is that all? Surely these people could have simply designed these very carefully from the ground to appease their gods, who have always resided in the sky no matter the culture.

That would be a reasonable conclusion were it not for the additional lines and such that are found in Peru.

For instance, in this one we can clearly see what appears to be a landing strip of sorts. To one end, the area is wide as if used for a staging area and the opposite is narrow as if this is the runway.

Why would the ancient South Americans create lines such as these unless there were aircraft which were meant to touch down and take off from here?

The last image shows this “landing strip” more clearly. Indeed, this is no mere etching, but rather, the mountain has been rendered smooth, as if carefully constructed for a purpose. Given the traditionally vast reserves of gold which once existed in South America, the Nazca lines, the runway shown, and the attitude displayed to the Spaniards, there is little wonder that the Annunaki visited this region.

Biblical Support

Strange as this will sound to some, there is even supporting evidence found in the Bible for the Annunaki.

Genesis chapter 6 verse 4 which reads; "There were giants in the earth in those days; and also after that, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they; bare children unto them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown."

Another translation renders “giants” as “the Nephilim,” which means “fallen ones.” Indeed, when we consider that the Annunaki did “fall” in the sense that their slips came down from the heavens, it stands to reason that this passage is referring to this alien race.

Further, note that it says that these Nephilim mated with humans. The Sumerians relate that the Annunaki performed genetic manipulations on humans, intermingling with them so as to create new offspring. In addition, the Sumerian texts indicate that these offspring were far larger than a normal human. Could it be that their first attempts at genetic manipulation were not quite what they sought to achieve and instead created a race of giants?

In looking at archaeological digs in recent years, this seems to be the case. In place after place, archeologists have been unearthing giants. Strangely though, the scientific community continues to deny these finds for they simply do not live up to preconceived notions regarding humanity.

Indeed, if the scientific community were to accept these findings, they would also have to accept the possibility that either the Annunaki were here at some point in the past or that humans have not become more fit for life on Earth, but less fit. This would contradict the Theory of Evolution for in that theory, survival of the fittest plays a pivotal role. So science continues to deny these finds.

The evidence is growing every day such that it is incontrovertible.

Egyptian Evidence

Archaeologists have long known about the strange creatures included in the hieroglyphics found in Ancient Egyptian Pyramids. However, for decades these researchers have attributed these images to all manner of other explanations. Some claim that these represent insects worshiped by the Egyptians whereas others just say they are representations of their enemies, as if by depicting these as sub-human they weaken them. So which is the case? Are they deities or enemies? Do these images depict creatures to fear or creatures in which to bow in reverence?

Perhaps the answer lay somewhere in the middle. Indeed, the images seem to resemble every alien encounter ever recorded and are eerily similar to what the Sumerians recorded as the Annunaki.

Hence, it stands to reason that the depictions are aliens.

If we bear in mind that the form of writing employed by the Egyptians, hieroglyphics was a pictorial form of writing, there can only be one explanation for how they depict these creatures. They were viewed both as gods and conquerors. Yet, these depictions appeared at the height of Egyptian achievement.

Should we believe thus that it is mere coincidence that creatures which seem to be Annunaki appear in both the writings of Ancient Egypt AND Sumeria at a time when they were at the pinnacle of their technology? Given what we know of the rest of the ancient world, that would require more of a stretch of the imagination than to believe both were influenced by an alien species far advanced to humans.

No, the Annunaki must have visited Egypt like they did Sumeria.

Further, many of the images of these creatures are shown receiving tribute or gifts in the nature of gold object and jewelry. Just as we learned from Sumerian culture, we learn that these creatures that share the same description have the same affection for gold. But why gold?

Some years ago, it was discovered that the pyramids had originally been covered, or encased in pure gold. Is there some connection?

Of course, archeologists who made this discovery believe it was used to give these structures a beautiful, shiny appearance which would be looked on in awe by people from great distances. While indeed, this would be the case, there could be a more plausible reason for the use of this metal on these structures.

If we are to believe the archaeologists, the pyramids were built by the Egyptians, yet how this was accomplished was never written, never recorded in any way. Why would these people record all their great military victories, their advances in medicine, and war machine technology only to be silent on their crowning achievement?

Could it be that they did not build the pyramids?

Most who study aliens today and in particular the Annunaki believe that these structures were built by them and for reasons we have yet to fully understand.

However, some crystals discovered near a couple of recent pyramid discoveries may shed light on this matter. We'll discuss these crystals shortly, but for now it is important to understand that tests with these crystals involving gold and the pyramids near which they were found have begun to yield some interesting information.

Global Evidence

Have you ever heard someone use of another that, “He can’t see the forest for the trees?”

What does that mean?

Simply put, it means that a person is unable to see the truth of a matter because they are too close to it. For instance, many people cannot see their own faults because they are too close to themselves. If a person is standing right at the edge of a forest, all he sees are a bunch of trees. This is not complete evidence of a forest, for it could just be a grove or stand. But if the person were to move further away from the trees, he could see that there is an entire forest.

When considering the Annunaki, many researchers have placed themselves too close to the research to accept the facts. Indeed, for many archaeologists, if the Annunaki were to be accepted as factual, this would negate years, even decades of research and teaching. So they maintain that aliens simply cannot be true. It’s sort of like job security.

Unfortunately for them, the evidence that someone other than the Egyptians must be responsible for the pyramids is beginning to become overwhelming.

As early as the 1980s, pyramids were discovered in the Amazon rain forests and although there have been known pyramids throughout Central America for hundreds of years, these were discounted as some other form of structure because they were not of the grand scale as the ones in Egypt.

However, careful research into the alignments, the internal chambers, and other such features now reveal that all these pyramids must have come from the same architect. The same people built them all and they clearly built them as they did for a reason.

28 Pyramids

The Great pyramids of Giza and those in other parts of Egypt are only the tip of an ever growing iceberg which threatens to sink everything archaeologists have sought to protect for decades.

The map below shows the locations of 28 known pyramids throughout the earth. One thing that is striking about these locations is that with the exception of a couple in Scandinavia and few in China, all are located in very temperate climates. This has led some alien researcher to conclude that the Annunaki do not like the cold...but really, who does?

Actually, there is a much better explanation for these locations and considering that researchers are finding new ones every few years in remote locations, there is no reason to assume this conclusion. I mean, surely if we have a life form that can travel 51 light years to harvest gold, they have the ability to make warm clothing for themselves.

No, what each of these locations have in common is that they are places that either are now or were at one time rich in mineral reserves, primarily gold. The other thing these locations have in common is that around the time their pyramids were built, they all experienced a rapid surge in technological advance.

The only exception to this is Ancient India and many researchers are scouring this region certain that the next great pyramid will be found there. For just as the other nations record great technological advances around the time their pyramids were built, India experienced a similar surge around the year 1000 A.D. This was a short time after the Annunaki were apparently visiting South and Central America.

It would seem that the Annunaki return to earth every so often to mind gold, much as the Spanish sailed the earth in search of the mineral. On finding gold, the Spanish would send ships every so often to collect the gold and return it to the home country. In the same way, the Annunaki appear to be doing the same, though traveling a much greater distance.

UFO Sightings Increasing?

Prior to the 1940s, UFO sightings were virtually unheard of. To be sure, some of the sightings that began to occur after that time were nothing more than new flight technology developed by either the United States military or weather organizations. Thus, even when legitimate UFO sightings occurred, these were often dismissed as weather balloons and jets.

However, in 1947 a crash in New Mexico of an Unidentified Aircraft made international news. We'll discuss that shortly, but for now it is important to understand that the years since that event have seen only increases in both the number of sightings and reported contacts.

Indeed, the map which follows plots the locations of every UFO sighting or report since the early 1950s through the year 2005. Some today believe this is a mass delusion, but considering the enormous numbers of individuals not only here in the U.S. but worldwide who have reported seeing alien spacecraft or made contact with these, that explanation does not fit.

For instance, let us consider for a moment that this is a mass delusion. According to the data then, Americans are far more delusional than Canadians, Mexicans, and Cubans. Yet, according to psychological research in recent years, there really is little difference between the four.

No, the “mass delusion” argument does not fit the known data regarding the mental state of the nation and surrounding neighbors. So there must be something else to explain this phenomena. What does the United States have that these other nations have far less of?

You guessed it...gold.

In fact, the United States holds the largest reserves of gold than any other nation and given what we have already learned about the Annunaki, that is their interest. And where is most of the gold stored? In the Federal Reserve Building in New York City. Look again at the map. See a pattern here?

Of course, as a wealthy nation, we have gold stored in jewelry shops, pawn shops, and similar places everywhere. In the cities where there is greater wealth, people wear more gold. Hence, looking again at the map, do you see a correlation?

In fact, it would not surprise me if the Annunaki fostered this interest in gold thousands of years ago in humans to make it easier for them to harvest the stuff. Indeed, it would be much easier to land, demand the gold, and leave than to stay and mine. And it would be nice if that were their intent, but the evidence suggests that the next time they visit, it will not be for the gold. Something has happened to their planet and they must be coming here to stay. How can we know?

For starters, we must consider the timing of their visits. Historically, the Annunaki only visited earth to mine gold every 3000 years. In fact, the cuneiform tablets which speak of these beings tell us this directly. When they come, they remain for a few hundred years, mine the gold in various locations, then leave. The last time they came was around 1000 years ago, which means that they are retuning prematurely.

In addition, they have sent scouting ships this time. Indeed, this is why all the sightings and reports of contact for they are scouting the planet. But because they have been here before, there is no need to scout for gold—they already know where it all is located. So the scouting must be for another purpose.

Downing of an Alien

As already mentioned, in 1947 an alien spacecraft crashed in the desert near Roswell, New Mexico, USA. Quickly the Air Force entered the area, secured a perimeter around the crash site, and hauled every item they could find away to Area 51 in southern Nevada, near Groom Lake.

But not before many witnesses could get to the area and testify to what they saw and heard.

I am not going to bore you with this old story for you likely already know more of it. The shortened version is that initially the Air Force confirmed the crash of an Unidentified Flying Object and released photos of some of the debris. Within a few days however, the Air Force officially denied these reports and issued a statement that the UFO was nothing more than a fallen weather balloon. Of course, few believed that story then and even fewer believe it today.

Today, the evidence is becoming so overwhelming that few believe anything the Air Force or the government tells them regarding aliens.

A short time after this, the Daily Mail of the United Kingdom ran a story about the alien that was involved in the crash, even leading a photo of the creature on a medical examining table. This photo made sensational headlines and was reported by governments around the world as a fake. But if someone were going to fake an alien, would it have not made sense to make it appear more “alien?”

Instead, this creature appears quite hominoid.

And here is an interesting point. Remember the descriptions from Sumeria and the hieroglyphs from Egypt? This creature looks nothing like those. Why?

To understand, we have to look back at some of the other things the Annunaki were involved with.

Remember Zechariah Sitchin mentioned earlier?

He is the one who first discovered that the Annunaki were engaging in selective breeding of humans for doing their bidding. They bred us much as we breed animals today. Yet they went further by engaging in genetic manipulations so that we would be more like them. Yet, at the same time there is evidence that once this occurred, they began to mate with humans and even take some back to Nibiru with them for further experiments. Why?

Much of the reason lies in their need for gold.

Astronomers have determined what they believe to be Nibiru based on the information provided by the Sumerians. They have found a planet roughly 51 light years away in our own galaxy. They have analyzed the planet and found that the atmosphere appears to be made from a gaseous form of gold.

Hence, it would appear that the Annunaki were experimenting on humans not just to make us better slaves, but also to help them get beyond their need for a gold-based atmosphere. Why?

The whole reason they continued to come to earth was to harvest gold and they did so every 3000 years because theirs was depleted. In much the same way as we have been depleting our ozone layer (which is made primarily from oxygen, the air WE breathe), they depleted their own. Hence, to replenish what they lost, they had to find a new source. Earth had plenty.

But they surely knew that once the new species (or figured it out at some point) had evolved and adapted to become more like them, gold would become scarce here as well. So they planned to become more like humans so as to be able to breathe oxygen. In reality though, the appearance of these Annunaki then were not likely much different from our own. The images we find in the Pyramids then are likely inclusive of their space suits, which allowed them to breathe in our atmosphere.

They likely figured out years ago that they were going to have to one day abandon their planet for another and they plan to make earth their home. Of course, won't they be in for a surprise when they discover that we have done to our world what they have done to theirs. The only real difference being that minerals are easier to come by and replenish than gas, so we, and they, are pretty well screwed when the ozone runs out.

But that has not stopped them from trying and it is certain that they are returning with the intent of taking over this planet. Scouts are used in military expeditions, not for gold finding or exploring. In addition, remember how I mentioned the increase in contacts made?

Indeed, of the UFO reports made each year, roughly 20% indicate that they were taken into the ship and experiments were performed on the captives. Then, the Annunaki released the captives after they had completed their experiments. Why did they release them and not just kill the humans if their intent is to take over by force?

The answer is to be found in other cuneiform tablets that surfaced a short time ago along with what we discovered when analyzing the crystals found at the pyramids. We will discuss this shortly but first, we need to know if they are already here and if so, how we can know.

Are the Annunaki Already Here?

Adding to the overwhelming evidence that the Annunaki have not only been to Earth numerous times in the past, but also completely explored the planet using technologies that humans developed only in the 20th Century is a map parchment that was found many centuries ago. This map clearly shows the coast of Antartica without the ice covering. In fact, it was not until the 20th Century that man first determined that there was land beneath the ice. This map had long been held to just be a poor outline of South America until a researcher named Alfred Neuman noticed that it aligned perfectly with the Queen Mary Coast, Antartic, sans ice. Thus there can be only a single conclusion regarding this map—it was made with someone who had the technological ability to see beyond the ice to the true coastline.

Of course, we know that humanity did not obtain this ability until the 20th Century and the map is at least several centuries old. So if the Annunaki did not leave the Americas until shortly before the arrival of the Spaniards, then this could easily account for the map.

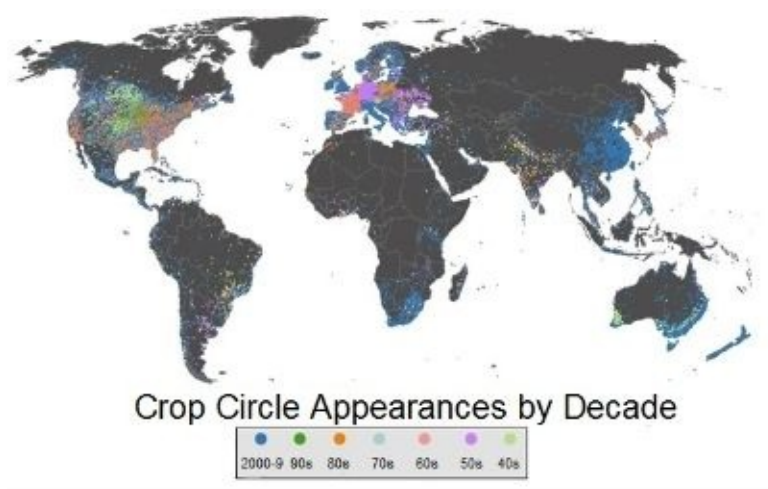

But what about evidence that they are now on Earth or at least visiting?

Crop Circles

The first crop circle was recorded in the 1940s, but at the time, no one thought too much of it. In fact, one news reporter at the time was convinced that it was caused by a sudden tornado that touched down undetected sometime during the night. Over the course of the next several years, a new crop circle appeared somewhere at least every few months. That was at least until a crop circle was found in 1966 in New Hampshire, USA. After that, crop circles began to appear somewhere in the world at least every month and sometimes twice or more.

Then in the late 1970s, crop circles began to appear more frequently and this pattern continues to our day. Today, there are literally hundreds of crop circles that appear somewhere in the world every month and that number continues to climb.

What's causing all the crop circles?

The spacecraft that crashed in Roswell, New Mexico was by all accounts some kind of saucer shaped ship. This should not surprise us much for the United States began working on such a design in the 1950s but were never able to make it work. In fact, there is one in the Smithsonian and the aircraft was originally called the Avrocar. Did they get the idea from the downed alien ship outside Roswell?

Well, consider the term they named the aircraft—AVROCAR.

There was a word that appeared in the ancient Cuneiform tablets we mentioned earlier which reads literally Havorcar. At first notice, it certainly seems to fit with that term which was used. Of course, if this was the term used by the Annunaki to describe their flying machine then the question is how did the Air Force just happen upon a similar term?

I just don't believe in coincidences.

In fact, because of the sound of the term, we decided to take things a step further and decipher more of the tablet and what we discovered was astounding. Not only did the term seem familiar enough to apply to the saucer that the Air Force designed, but notice what else it sounds similar to.

Hover-car...as in hover craft!

We were stunned because this term we thought originated here in America with the invention of hovercraft machines. But as it turned out, it originated with the Annunaki. In fact, as we dig deeper into this tablet, we discovered that not only did the term originate with the Annunaki, but it appeared that they got the term from us...in the future.

In other words, there is a very strong indication that not only do the Annunaki visit the Earth every so many thousands of years, but they do so from a time future even to us. They time-travel. We will discuss this more in the next chapter for there were many amazing discoveries on these tablets that anyone wanting to survive the next visit from the Annunaki will want to pay close attention to. The next full-scale visit will not be as friendly as the last but there are ways to protect yourself.

For now, consider the rest of what we have learned from the crop circles.

Not only are these created when these scouting ships touch down, but they are also used to form some form of code. We believe we have uncovered what the codes mean so read on.

The first crop circles were fairly simple in design, almost as if the Annunaki were tapping on our window to let us know they were back. But over time, these have begun to become more elaborate and at first we thought it was a prank—as if they were teasing us.

But then we stepped back so we could see the forest rather than the trees. We took a closer look at the crop circles in much the same way we looked at the Nazca Lines. We stepped back and looked at them as a whole and discovered to our amazement and amusement that they were communicating to interested parties. The Annunaki were using these scouting missions to send a message to those who were interested in what they had to say.

The first complex crop circle to get our attention was the one shown in Figure 31. The reason is because it is very similar in structure to a Mandala, which is an ancient Hindu and Buddhist symbol for the Universe. We were not sure why this would appear so we began to look more closely at other crop circles. We began to notice patterns and symbols when suddenly the thought struck us that of course, they taught the Sumerians to write and the writing and language used by these is one that is not linguistically tied to any other on Earth.

Cuneiform is the first known written language and it was written in symbols. A short time later, they taught the Egyptians how to write in another symbolic form we call hieroglyphs. Hence, it only made sense that they were communicating to humans who would listen in symbolic form.

So we decided the simplest thing to do would be to arrange the crop circles according to the order in which they appeared in a given time frame or locale. What we found was that a pattern was being repeated and this can be seen on the following page.

When we deciphered this message, we discovered what we had already suspected. The Annunaki are from another planet, Nibiru and they have to travel backwards in time to reach us. In their time, our two races are united but only because they fought a war with us in our time and won. However, they only fought because we fought first. They state that their intentions are to settle on Earth because their planet is dying and some have developed the ability to breath oxygen. In addition, they already know the names of those friendly to them but they are unable to know them by sight because they lost their vision as a result of the destruction of their atmosphere. They want to live here long enough to study our ozone so that they can replicate it on their planet. According to them, we visit their planet also in their past (for that is the only way) and are seeking to help them repair their atmosphere. The two planets can communicate in real time, but not visit in real time.

Finally, they revealed part of what we already knew about the crystals and provided the final clue to how people can show that they are friendlies and want to be part of the new society they will establish here on Earth once the war is over. This will be the focus of the next chapter so for now, let us look at the last two crop circles and further evidence that they really are here, not in full force, but in numbers large enough to alter history.

This particular crop circle we found over and over. In decoding the others, we discovered that this is a symbol which calls for peace. It indicates that they want peace, but are authorized by our future leaders to settle here on Earth by any means necessary, which means that they will fight anyone who fights them.

The one in Figure 34 we found most interesting for notice the circle to the lower right. This is nothing more than digital language, like our computers today only far more sophisticated. In this message, we are able to locate the names of literally tens of thousands of people who they already know from their history will side with them.

They state here that if these are to wear the Transference crystals, they will be able to identify them and place them under their protection for the duration of the war. They also made it clear through this message that humans are under orders from future humans not to engage in the battle, but rather to stand aside and let what happens happen.

They already know the outcome of the war and only those who actively engage them will perish. They call this a War of Attrition and assimilation.

Of course, whether this is true or a ploy to weaken our resolve to fight remains to be seen, but from what we discovered when researching the crystals, we tend to believe their story.

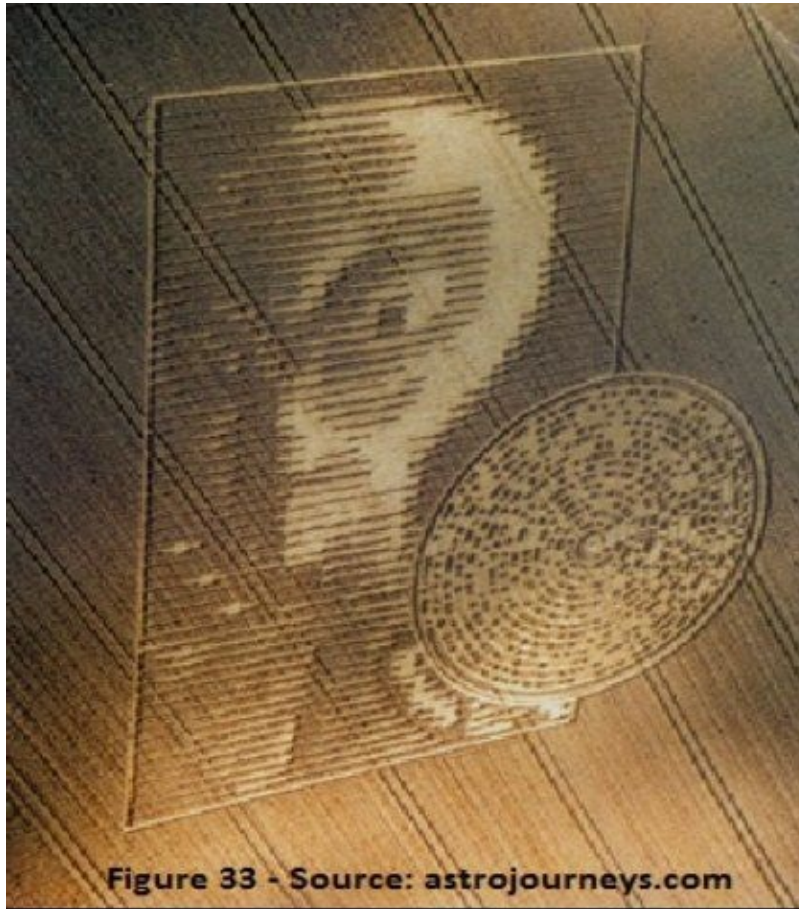

Figure 34 shows something that still perplexes us however. We matched certain crop circles and using the clues provided by the message in Figure 31, we were able to determine a precise point of interest to the Annunaki.

What is this location? This is roughly the area known as Pine Ridge Reservation in the Bad Lands and it is the location for perhaps more recent Big Foot sightings than any other in the world. In recent years, there were Big Foot sightings in that area in 2006, 2008, 2009, 2012, and again this year on February 14. Clearly, something is either stirring the Big Foot in this area or drawing them. What does this have to do with the Annunaki?

Remember that the Annunaki performed genetic mutations of humans to make us more like them: Able to breed more frequently and be better workers. Before this, humans were less well, human and more like apes. We had very hairy bodies, lived more like animals, and were not as aggressive. The Annunaki bred those “undesirable” traits out of most of us and it seems that there are still roaming the earth ancestors to ourselves. These are the Big Foot. We cannot be sure what they want from these creatures, but one thing is certain: They know where to find them and plan to do so if they have not already.

Some possibilities for their interest include either the elimination of that species from the planet as it would appear that was their intent all along or returning humans to that form using some kind of genetic retrofitting once they take over. We cannot say for certain, though we can say that not all humans will face such an outcome if that is their intention. We know this because of the Cuneiform tablets and crystals we will examine in the next chapter.

The Rapid Advancement of Technology

As mentioned earlier, the Sumerians are regarded by historians as being the inventors of Western Civilization and we now know that the Annunaki were responsible for this. Ironically, we can only assume based on what we have learned from them through the crop circles that humans have done the same for them on their planet. This seems to create a time paradox which we find very difficult, no, impossible to explain, but those are the facts. In any case, we can tell when the influence of the Annunaki is felt on humans by the rapid technological advances which occur with their presence.

For instance, consider the developments by the Sumerians after the Annunaki visited and genetically modified them. They invented...

- invented earliest known written language, cuneiform

- a language regarded as unique; linguistically disconnected from any other language family on Earth

- the first city states

- first codified legal and administrative systems

- the wheel

- astronomers; first mapped constellations

- number systems with base 10 (decimal) and base 6

- military formations and basic divisions; archers, infantry and cavalry

- formal schools

- pottery kilns

- intensive agriculture

- high rise structures and advanced architecture

- medical expertise; diagnostic, surgical techniques

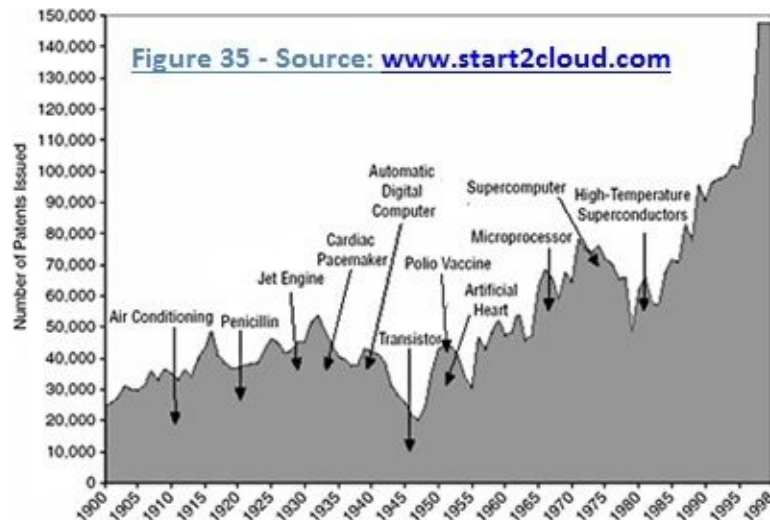

- textiles and clothing

- proverbs

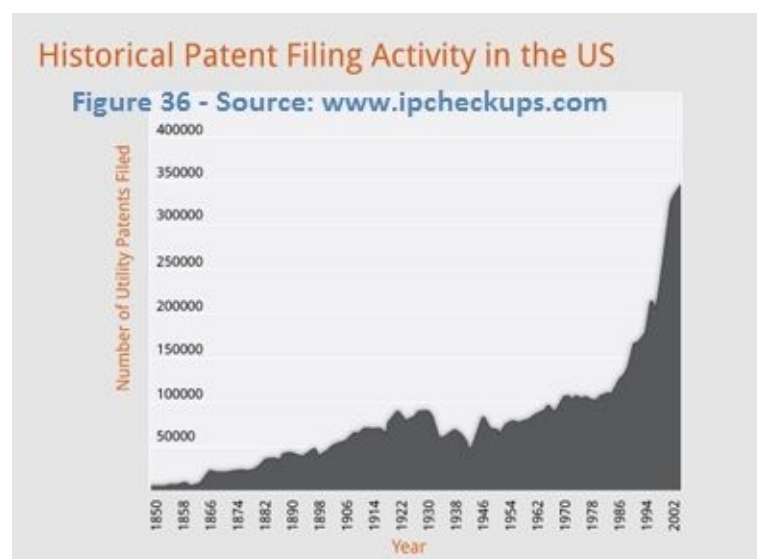

- library catalogs

- historians

So the Annunaki were extremely beneficial to humans. As was mentioned earlier, after their scout ship crashed in Roswell in 1947, the Air Force began work on a ship similar to the Annunaki's but without success. However, a look at the advancement of technology since that time indicates that through reverse engineering, scientists are unraveling their technology.

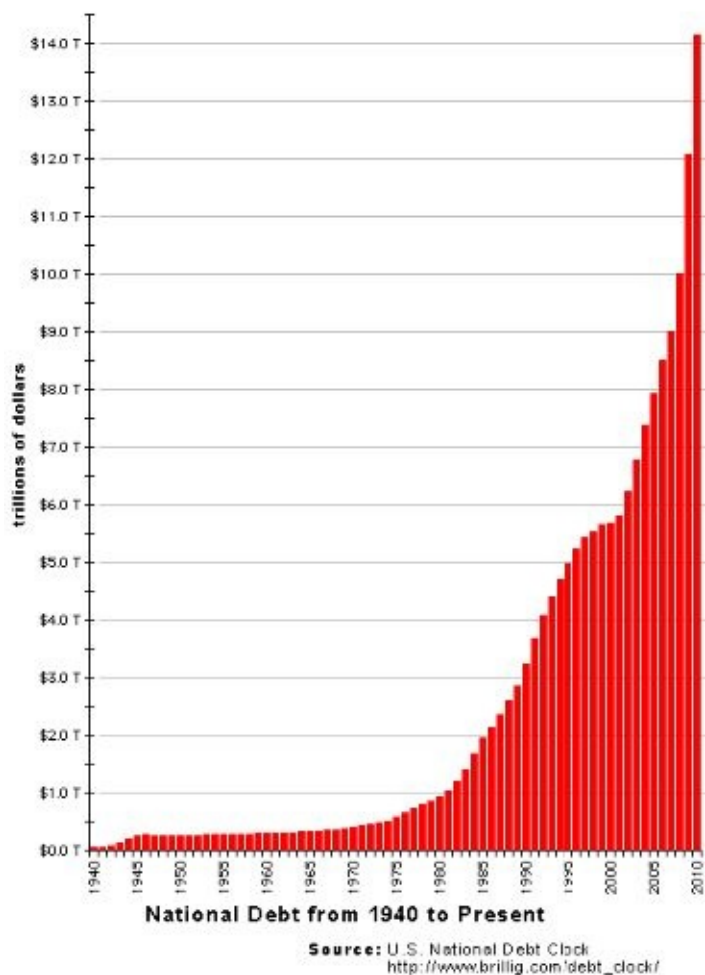

Looking at the figure 35 chart, note how technology was growing steadily until after the year of the crash. In fact, there was a drop in new tech prior to this point then all of a sudden, new technologies began emerging at a very rapid pace.

The same can be seen from the above graph figure 36 which shows the growth of new patents over time. There were quite a few in the late forties and fifties, but starting in the 60s, there was a sudden surge in new patents, indicating a surge in technological advances, likely from reverse engineering the technologies found on the crashed scout ship.

Hence, it seems abundantly clear that the Annunaki have arrived, at least in small numbers. But based on what we can see from the reactions of the governments of the world, the U.S. included, the reaction is more one of fear of the Annunaki than appreciation.

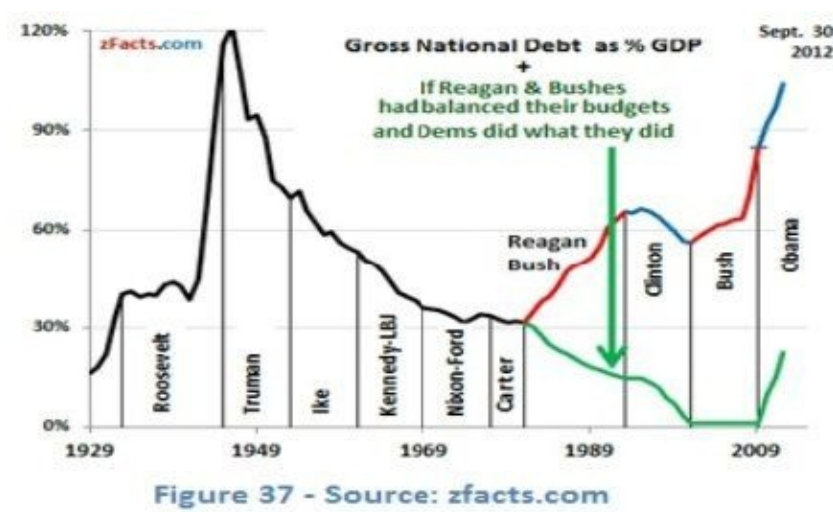

Preparations Regardless of Cost

As this chart shows, beginning in the 1980s, the United States national debt began to skyrocket. Why?

The majority of the spending has been on defense and in particular advance technologies in warfare. Indeed, who can forget Ronald Reagan's Star Wars defense program?

In other words, something during this time period convinced our government that the Annunaki were not coming on friendly terms. To further drive this point home and demonstrate the desperation with which our government is preparing, consider the massive increases in spending in just recent years.

Our government would not be spending itself into a hole from which the only escape is collapse unless it believed there was a true imminent threat to the nation. Hence, our government clearly believes that the Annunaki are coming to conquer and it is doing all it can to prepare. But will they be successful or will the alien race from outside our atmosphere be victorious?

Certainly we cannot foretell the future, but again, based on what we learned from the crop circle messages, the cuneiform tablets, and other elements of research we have endeavored, we tend to believe the Annunaki story.

Let us now consider what we found with the Transference crystals and pyramids which convinced us.

Protective Crystals?

While searching a pyramid in Central America in 2002, researcher Howard Bell noticed that there were crystals strewn about on the ground near one entrance. Curious, he picked a few up and examined them. Because they were unlike anything he had ever seen before, he tucked several into this bag and continued looking around at the structure.

On his way back to his lab, he happened upon a friend who was conducting seismic readings along a fault. Bell stopped to say hi and as he approached his friend, he was quickly told to stop, that something was wrong. Bell froze and his friend began turning dials and knobs, while shaking his head. The equipment was generating a buzzing sound and no matter what his friend tried, the noise did not stop. But after a moment, Bell's friend decided it was nothing...that maybe the equipment was malfunctioning, and he went to Bell. The two took a walk towards the fault line and as they walked away, both noticed that the sound began to dissipate. Turning, they both began to move back towards the equipment and the near they got to it, the higher the pitch in the tone.

After chatting for a bit about what could be causing the disruption, the two settled on the idea that it could be the crystals. So they ran an impromptu field test and found that the crystals resonated a different sound depending on the color. Bell decided that he was on to something and excused himself. His friend offered to come along for he had far more equipment in his lab than Bell which may be useful. Bell agreed.

The Discovery of Crystals of Unknown Origin

On reaching the lab, the two men began to research what kind of crystals they had found but were unable to locate an answer. Nothing they looked at seemed even remotely similar to what they had found so they decided on some additional tests.

They submitted the crystals to stress tests and found that they had a hardness less than diamonds but greater than coal. That told them nothing. They tested the mineral itself and found that although the crystals contained primarily carbon, they also found gold, sulfides, and silicon, but in no known combinations.

Perplexed, they continued running tests until they decided that they needed additional assistance.

Eventually the two men returned to the United States and found a group which I am associated with, the Society of Alien Studies. We examined the crystals and determined that they were not of an origin on Earth, but must have either come from a meteorite or were brought to the planet by aliens.

Testing the Crystals/Gold Amplifies

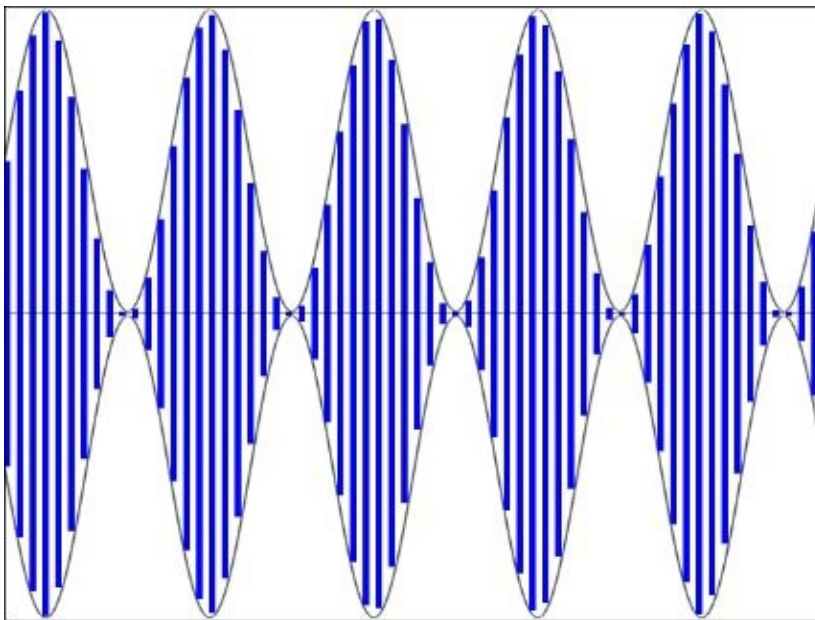

Because Bell had already filled us in on his findings, we decided to separate all the crystals according to color and size. Each was tested according to chemical makeup and found that although each contained the same basic elements, there were subtle differences in composition. We then began to pour over all the documents we had and came across certain passages in the cuneiform tablets that spoke of “transference stones.” At least, that was the best translation Professor Maxwell could come up with.

After separating the stones according to appearance, several tests were run. Many of these tests proved useless and it seemed there was nothing in particular which was unusual about them. However, returning to the cuneiform tablet translations and carefully researching several terms and subjects which were still not entirely understood proved useful.

One passage indicated the Sumerians understood more about radium spectrums and microwave technologies than previously believed. Various tools were used to test the crystals for subatomic wavelengths. One striking feature we discovered was that gold amplified the results.

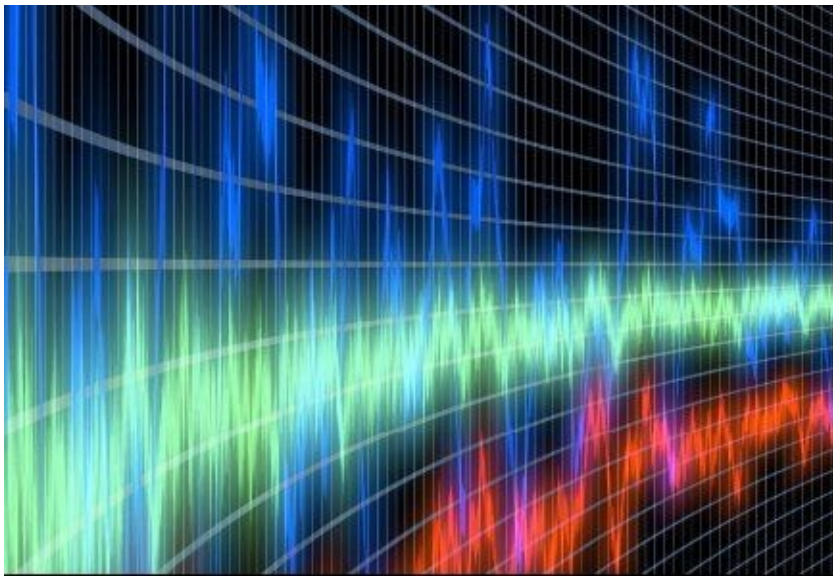

Findings

The first thing found was that the crystals all projected both the ability to receive and transmit subatomic signals. It was as if these amplified the same signals that occur within an atom, which humans never notice but occur none-the-less.

For instance, the signals from the quarks within the crystals emitted a strong and regular frequency similar to a radio signal. This was a property which had been previously unheard of. Until testing these crystals, physicists believed that quarks were unpredictable. For instance, it is well known that quarks have the ability to traverse time and dimension, yet no one understands exactly how, for their behavior is most unpredictable. In fact, although we do not understand how they work, we do know they work and these are the reason we are able to have all electronic devices we have today.

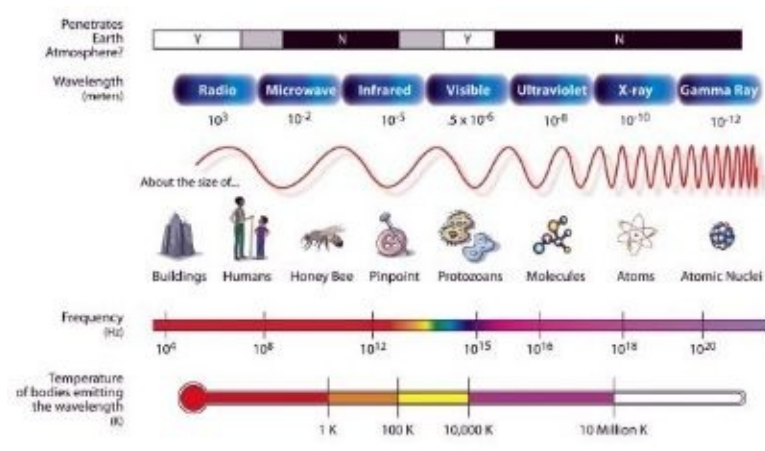

But in the case of these crystals, the emissions were so regular and predictable, Bell knew something was there. So he ran further tests and found that the crystals could be sorted into three primary groups, based on the measure of frequencies they transmitted.

In other words, these crystals all received transmissions in exactly the same manner but transmitted very different signals.

The signals transmitted related to a molecular wave as shown in the blue spectrum; an atomic wave as shown with the orange; and a nucleatic wave as shown in the green spectrum. But the crystals reacted most strongly in the presence of gold.

But Why?

Ancient Cuneiform Inscriptions Inform Us of the Meaning of the Crystals

It was then that an associate noticed something interesting in the cuneiform tablets.

The Annunaki have three tiers to their human society. They have common workers, artisans, and administrators.

It was determined further that in the case of these tiers, they also provide very different perks and benefits. In addition, their mode of speech is not vocal as with humans, but rather through radio waves. Thus it was concluded that these crystals were the means by which the Annunaki would communicate with humans. Depending on the position in their society, the signals would vary allowing them the ability to know where in their caste system each human they were “speaking” with belonged.

To the Annunaki, this was important for even within their own society they have a similar social order. Thus, an Annunaki administrator would not converse nor mate with a common worker. Their society was strictly governed according to these rules.

So as it turns out, the particular order of their society a person belongs to would be governed according to the crystal which was worn or carried.

Something else discovered was that people could move up or down in their society depending on achievements or penalties. Thus, if a person began as a common worker and showed special talent, they may be allowed, though not forced, to advance in their society.

In addition, they often allowed humans to choose which tier in their society they wished to be placed initially. As long as the human performed according to the requirements of the position, they retained that position. However, if they did not perform, they would be moved to another position within their society.

For instance, the following tablet tells the story of one man who determined to be an artisan. But in time it was determined that he had no true artistic talent. He did, however exhibit great ability to lead others. So the council allowed him the choice of either moving up in their society to become an administrator or take a “demotion” to the level of common worker. Oddly, the man choose the worker status.

We were puzzled at this move until we discovered the various rules governing each status and determined that perhaps the mans choice was made more for sexual reasons than any other, strange as that may sound.

This information came from Egyptian Hieroglyphs.

Hieroglyphic Evidence

Hieroglyphic writings that discussed what can only be termed a “caste” system among the Annunaki have been extant for years; though this is perhaps not the best term for there is the ability to move up or down according to desire, accomplishments, and talents.

What was not known was the exact reasons for this system, the manner in which people could move within that system, and the actual benefits of each tier.

As these writings were more closely studied with the evidence now held, it all became clear. It was almost as if the Annunaki left humanity all the information needed to help organize prior to their eventual return.

In the case of commoners, these would carry the lighter colored crystals and meant that their jobs in society required performing simple, menial tasks like farming, mining, building, cleaning, and so on—not too dissimilar to such jobs today. As was already known about the Annunaki, they had a keen interest in breeding for certain reasons and thus they provided mates of their choosing to the common workers. Dr. Ward believes the reason the former Artisan chose to become a commoner was because he was unsuccessful in finding a mate in his higher role.

This is because Artisans and Administrators are free to mate in the same manner as we today. They meet someone they like/love and mutually agree to bond.

However, the worker class was not akin to a slave but more like a paid worker of today. It would appear that the slave-nature adopted by the Egyptians came later, after the Annunaki left Earth. But the workers did not choose their work. Must as communism of old chose the work assignments, the Annunaki tested individuals and decided the work they would perform, where they would live, and with whom they would mate.

As for Artisans, these could freely choose their form of art and their mate, but had no choice of where to live. As for their art, it was strictly curtailed to social needs however and should an artisan create something not approved, it would be destroyed. In other words, completely free expression was not permitted.

It was further found that Administrators were the smallest group and these were pretty much like such roles in society today. Those entrusted with governing society were granted choice of housing, which generally meant the finest, were paid higher wages, and enjoyed much greater perks.

Not only did they get to make their own choices, but they often were able to get away with various abuses of their authority. On the flip side, it was found that the Annunaki often allowed these abuses so that if they were found in violation, they could be legally transported from earth back to Nibiru. The Annunaki were sticklers for law.

Nothing is known what came of those transported, but there are indications to believe that the purpose was for further genetic testing, manipulations, and experimentation. Thus, although this position was revered and desired, only those who performed their duties in an honorable way were allowed to continue without fear of reprisal. No indication was found that any artisans or workers were ever transported.

Hence Bell determined that the workers carried the lighter colored crystals, the artisans the more colorful, and the administrators the dark crystals. This also fits with the crystals found, for the crystals of abundance were the lighter ones and the darker were far less common.

One final thing determined. With the coded message the Annanuki provided through the crop circles coupled with the information found in the ancient writings, it was determined that the Annunaki would like to see many people already in possession of these crystals when they arrive. But he still could not understand the reason the crystals transmitted better in the presence of gold.

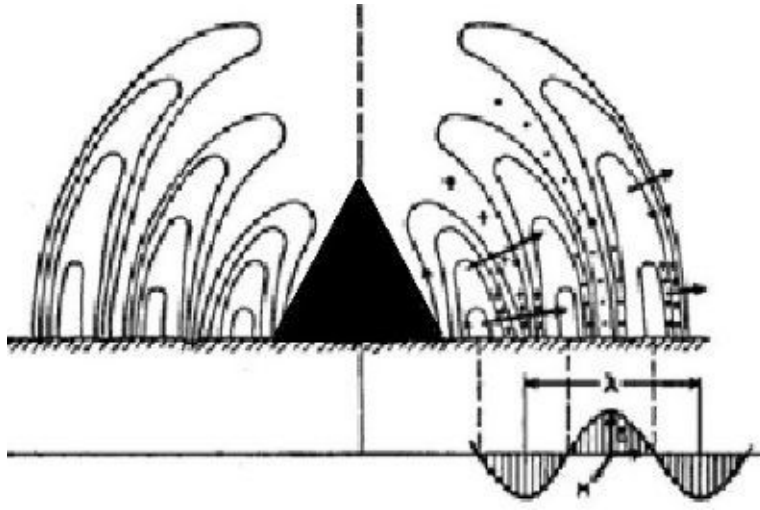

Teams are scouring the earth today, primarily near the ancient pyramids, searching for these crystals so that these can be distributed to anyone seeking to become a member of their society.

We are in the process of establishing a distribution channel so that these life-saving crystals may be provided worldwide prior to the arrival of the Annunaki.

Readings from the Pyramids

Two things puzzled Bell though. Why were these crystals found only near the Pyramids? And why did gold seem to make the crystals more energized?

In order to understand, he brought special measuring equipment similar to that which we used to determine the wavelengths and frequencies of the crystals to various pyramids. This is what we found.

When brought near to the pyramids, signals were transmitted and clearly received by the crystals. In fact, considerable disturbances were noticed in the atmosphere surrounding the pyramids so we took our equipment to various locations around the structures. We placed crystals in various locations and various quantities and measured the results.

No matter where we placed the crystals, the signals were strengthened and sort of “bent” in the direction of the top of the pyramid. Then we noticed that what appeared to be some form of transmission occurred. We then took the crystals further away and found that no matter where they were located, the signals transmitted from the crystals were transmitted in the direction of the top of the pyramid.

Thus, we determined that the pyramids act as a transmitter to send signals to the Annunaki on Nibiru from Earth. We recalled that the Annunaki claimed that in their time, both civilizations are able to communicate in real time so we believe that these structures are built in such a way that real time transmissions can be performed.

In addition, we noticed that the signals were boosted when we were holding the crystals on our person as if we were becoming part of the transmission. We received nothing in return, but clearly, we were part of the transmission. We can only surmise that in this way, the Annunaki will use their abilities to communicate with humans on their arrival. In addition, we noticed that it did not matter if we were wearing the crystals, holding them in our hands, or carrying them in our pocket—the signal transmissions were the same.

The something occurred to one of the assistants. The wedding rings...gold...the pyramids had originally been covered in gold. Suddenly it all made perfect sense. Circuit boards in computers can be made from either tin or gold because both conduct microcircuits very well. However, tin is usually used because of the cost of gold, though gold is far better. Hence, the transference crystals function like transmitters and gold helps improve the transmission. Clearly, the Annunaki were far more advanced than anyone even imagined—and we know they are very advanced.

Thus, we believe these crystals are the key to surviving the arrival of the Annunaki and finding placement within their society. It matters not which placement a person chooses, provided they can perform the duties assigned and do so with honor. If one carries a light colored crystal, the Annunaki will recognize that person as a worker. If they have the gold-tone crystals, the person will be identified as a craftsman or artisan. And to carry the darker crystals will identify to the Annunaki that this person is to be entrusted with the duties reserved for rulers. As long as a person has Annunaki blood in their veins (which clearly all humans do), is on their “list” of friendlies, and possesses a transference crystal, the Annunaki will welcome them as allies, or maybe even friends.

Can FEMA Protect You?

FEMA and the Department of Homeland Security are two organizations established to both protect America and ensure our way of life on Earth. However, from the evidence we have gathered we cannot say with certainty that these can succeed in protecting life on the planet when the Annunaki arrive.

We are not privy to what they know and how much.

What we do know is that based on their preparations, they anticipate casualties in the millions. Thus it appears that the government is determined to make a stand. This makes sense.

We believe that there are two things that anyone concerned can do.

The first is to stop spreading the conspiracy theory that our government is planning to destroy itself and its citizens; this is clearly not the case.

The next thing that can be done is to obtain a transference crystal regardless of your position either for or against the Annunaki. Why?

There is no doubt that the war will be a terrible one and anyone with a crystal will greatly increase their odds of survival. This is because we have no indication that the government will suppress the distribution of these. Hence, these will not harm one's chances as a citizen of this country. However, these will prevent the Annunaki from targeting you and if they win they will have a place for you in their society. From there, it is up to you.

If you want to be a loyal citizen of Annunaki, you can. But if you decide that you would like to infiltrate their society, you can do this as well. In other words, by having one of these crystals you have nothing to lose. These provide you with a 100% chance of survival. Without the crystals, the chances of survival are reduced, though by how much depends entirely on whether our government is successful against these alien invaders or not.

However, recall too that the coded message sent through the crop circle did not include everyone living on Earth. Only certain persons are permitted to hold these crystals. We have built a database to scan according to name as these were provided by the Annunaki.

The first step in survival is to find out if you are on that list. To find out if your name is on the list of Annunaki friendlies, go to Are You On the List?

About the Author

Peter A. Grimm is a Biological Researcher at an undisclosed location. An avid Annunaki researcher, he has spent his life in collaboration with numerous researchers trying to understand why they are coming and when. In this, his first book, he presents the findings of the research team with which he associates.

The team believes that not only are the Annunaki going to arrive very soon, but that they have plans far different from what their future provides. They believe that the Annunaki are bent on altering their future in a way that does not bode well for humanity. Thus the team is working around the clock to determine a time for their arrival, knowing that this could prove invaluable to survival.
